In 1872, when it was found that Grant would be re-nominated, the report circulated that in view of many groundless reports as to his seeking nomination he would decline to be a candidate. So positive were the reports upon this point that in May, 1872, we wrote him a private letter on the subject, to which a reply was received which we are now permitted to print. This has nothing directly to do with the third term, but it shows how Grant left with reference to the first and second terms, and will serve to disabuse the minds of those, if any there be, who honestly believe the President is capable of scheming for a nomination in '76.

Message No. 68 from the same house was concurred in, with the following amendment substituted for the last resolution:

Resolved, That the revised hymnal now set forth is not to be regarded as a finalty, consequently it may be revised by many part and the success of the Republican party, the third interests of the whole country demand the success of the Republican party. If it is deemed advisable, I am willing to make any sacrifice to accomplish that success. I feel that I did make a sacrifice in giving up the high position so highly prized by me—one created for me by an appreciative public, for which act I can never thank them sufficiently. Now, if I can be of service to the party that chose me, then I shall render them that service conscientiously and to the best of my ability. The personal sacrifice made four years ago can not be made to the form the trouble of the Chicago Tribune, had the company, added to what he already held, to give him a controlling interest, of the paper at an early day. An interview with Mr. Medill shows the statement which when the paper with the following amendment substituted for the last resolution:

Eclipse went ashore aix miles east of Black river last night. No lives were lost. The yessel is not badly damaged, and can be gotten off. The Eclipse had her machinery taken out of her in this port, and was being towed to Huron by the tug Yosemite. The wind was so strong that the tug, with her anchors out and a full head of steam, could not hold her ground, and to save herself was obliged to cut her tow loose.
